KEYNOTE: WHO DECIDES?

Daniela Lamas, MD, is a New York Times contributing opinion writer and a pulmonary and critical care physician at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston. Her keynote address will explore the increasing tension in decision making at key junctures of illness and the role of clinical ethics to help mediate, followed by dialogue with the Center's Rosemary Flanigan Chair in Bioethics, Tarris (Terry) Rosell, DMin, PhD, HEC-C.

Lindsey Jarrett: Solving AI Problems on the Ground

Dr. Lindsey Jarrett, Vice President of Ethical AI at the Center for Practical Bioethics, works to mitigate risks and potential harms associated with the unexamined use of artificial intelligence and machine learning in healthcare. The goal is not to eliminate technological advancement, but to guard against unintended consequences, such as reproducing systemic biases inherent in the data used to facilitate machine learning.

Lindsey says, “It’s important for me that I get to solve real problems that are emerging where there is not a lot of guidance from government or policies or procedures. I get to be boots on the ground with the people who are solving the problems.”
